Under the form of a novel the work 'assails with conspicuous ability, and from a Catholic point of view, the Jesuits. The spirit of the book may be gathered from a senience or two from the chapter on "The Two Popes." "In the Empire of the Roman Church, which comprises, it is said, 200,000,000 subjects, there are two kings. The one is visible to all, and is called the Pope. He is enthroned at the Vatican, with cardinals, chamberlains, prelates and guards, arranged like stage-dancers in a drama of the fifteenth century. The other is the real ruler. He is established at the Gesu, and is called the General of the Jesuits. He is the head of an association the most united, the most energetic, and the

How to Rob Bee-Hives.

A Soldier arrived from Savannah, who was through with Shermon, tells of the trip, as reported in the Dayton Journal:

The boys learned how to rob bee-hives without the penalty of stinging. The plan was to rapidly approach the hive, take it up suddenly, and hoisting it upon the shoulder, with the open end behind, run like thunder! The bees hustle out, and fly back to the place where the hive stood. The honey the place where the hive stood. The honey belongs to the boys, who win it! A cavalry lieutenant with his squad, rode up to a plantation house, one day, and were pretty crabidly received by the girls of the house, who desired to know "Why in the thunder you'uns cant let we'uns be?" and hoped the devil would get the Yanks. The lieutenant was not very well pleased with his reception, and seeing some terming looking hives of and seeing some tempting looking hives of honey in the yard, he ordered one of his honey in the yard, he ordered one of his men to to hoist one up to him. The hive was handed up in a jiffy, and the lieutenant bidding the gals good-bye, started off with the hive on his shoulder. But the bees came out the wrong way, and swarmed upon the lieutenant and his horse, compelling the former to drop the hive, while the taunting rebel females on the porch, clapped their dainty, tiny hands, stamped their little bare feet, and screamed "goody! goody!! goody!! you until they cried for joy.

[Correspondence of the Union Press.]

NEAR SAVANNAH, GA., Dec. 20, 1864. Doubtless you are already aware of the facts that, after our campaign into Alabama in pursuit of General Forrest, or after our return rather, our army destroyed the railroads leading into Atlanta from the North, and thus effectually closed all communication with America or the land of white

We left Atlanta on the 16th of November, after destroying all the public buildings, except the churches, that could be of any military advantage to the enemy. We left with twenty days' rations for our army, which numbers not far from 65,000 menmarching on an average of from fifteen to eighteen miles per day. After about three days' march we began to find a section of country well improved, and our men "fared sumptuously every day" by foraging. We had an abundance of such things as sweet potatoes, meat of every kind, sugar, molasses, honey, flour, meal, and sometimes butter. These things were foraged by a regularly organized forage corps, composed of men from every company in each regi-ment, brigade and division. The weather for most of the time was splendid for marching, although some days were uncomforta-bly warm, and a few days of rain made the roads, in one or two instances, rather

Thus we moved on and on, sometimes marching for two or three days in the direc-tion of some town or city, as though we would strike the place, and then suddenly "tack about," as the sailors say, and move almost at right angles with our former course. Thus Gen. Sherman baffled all the plans of the rebels, who could have no idea as to his ultimate destination; not even until we approached to within forty-five or fifty miles of Savannah. It is said that the track made by all the columns of our army was sixty miles in width, from the right to

On the 24th of November, while all our

On the 24th of November, while all our friends in the North and our brother soldiers in the East were enjoying their sumptuous thanksgiving dinner, the old 2d division, 14th army corps, was entering into Milledgeville, the capital of Georgia.

From Milledgeville we again moved as though we would strike Augusta, and after marching a day or two in that direction again veered to the right, and then it was known that we would strike Savannah.

We had the black swamps to contend with for the last forty or fifty miles, and often were obliged to make new roads—the rebels having entirely destroyed the old the rebels having entirely destroyed the old ones—and some days we would not make more than two or three miles in a day. We crossed many a dark and narrow stream, which, perhaps, would not be more than twenty feet wide, but which, like some of the lakes of our own State, (Michigan), seemed to be almost bottomless.

There was much of interest to be learned by me on this campaign. I think that not less than seven or eight thousand of slaves followed with and in the rear of our army Here might be seen the robust man of mid-dle age and the slender youth of but few summers. There the old woman of three-score-and-ten, bent by the weight of years and labor, tottering along by the aid of her staff, and by her side her daughter, a woman of middle age, and in the arms of the latter a nursing babe, while three or four little wooly heads completing the group brought up the rear, some of whom were of hardly sufficient age and strength to waddle along and keep up. I could discover in the where she was going. "Doan know, sah, was her reply; "Ise gwine wid ye alls. Again I asked: "Do you think 'the year of jubilee is come?" "Yes, sah, sartain," sh replied; "Ise gwine to work no more for old massa and missus and pick cotton in de fiel", 'case Ise free now!" And with that a smile lit up her sable countenance which spoke volumes in favor of the universal love of and longing for freedom which is im-planted in the breast of every human being, and which cannot be crushed out of even this down-trodden race. Oh, how many weary years had that old woman toiled, day and night, for—perhaps a cruel, exacting, tyrannical master and mistress— and all for what? Their own aggrandizement and her degradation and misery, have seen the old crone and middle-aged and even the children, rejoice at the pros pect of freedom, until in their ecstacies they felt like kissing the very ground trodden by the Yankee army. They may tell me who will how happy and contented the slaves are, and how they will fight for their masters, but in all the slave territory I have passed over, I have never yet seen but one contented family of slaves, and that was in Kentucky. Dr.—, an old bachelor, has a mulatto mistress, and by her has several children that enjoy almost the freedom—saving education—of whites,

It is to the effect that many years ago, some say fifty, certain stolid Dutchmen, resident ed. It is dated Rome, December 2, and is in Virginia, undertook the work of cutting the canal. One thing is certain; that about that number of years ago the State authorities of Virginia authorized the creation of a scientific board, which was duly sent down from Richmond to investigate says: "The sentiments expressed in the sent down from Richmond to investigate says: "The sentiments expressed in the and decide upon the practicability of making the canal. The progress of the work has not been wholly unmarked by instances of rare bravery. In this respect it may be said that Sergeant William Robinson, of the Twenty-second United States colored troops, chief director of carts and wagons, has constantly stood in the middle of the pit to place his vehicles in their proper positions. He has done his duty manfully. The same may be said of all the colored troops, who, by reason of their color and the fact that their capacity for courage and endurance under a galling fire has been hitherto in a measure considered an experiment, are deserving of especial mention.

Vicar on Earth of that God who is the Pastor of Peace, he yearns to see these wraths appeased and peace restored.

In proof of this he wrote to the Archbishops of New York and New Orleans as far back as October, 1862, inviting them to exert themselves in bringing about this holy object.

You may, then, honorable gentlemen, feel well assured that whenever a favorable will not fail to avail himself of it to hasten so desirable a result, as it is his most earnest wish that all nations may be united in the bonds of charity, peace and love.

The white troops throughout did manfully, and have, in common with their colored brethren, won a liberal and most complimentary meed of praise from Gen. Butler.—[Cor. N. Y.*Herald.

Gen. Rousseau's Political Record.

Kentucky Senate, May 21, 1861, and his speech at Shelbyville, Tenn., April 2, 1864, exactly show his political political position from first to last. In the former he said: Kentucky is in a false position. I felt it from the first. Yet, she having having assumed a neutral attitude, I felt it to be my duty to stand by her, and I have faithfully done so. I am willing to stand by the po-sition of Kentucky, if we can do so in peace and security. Our Government has not ob-jected to it. But the position is an awk-ward one, and will soon be more awkward. Secessionists will not allow, you to maintain your armed neutrality one moment longer your armed neutrality one moment longer than they can help it. You will see it. They will destroy it when they can, and in any way they can. I submit, with others, to Kentucky's neutral position. But the neutrality that fights all on one side I do not understand. Troops leave Kentucky in broad daylight, and our Governor sees them going to fight against our Government, yet nothing is said or done to prement.

I will not aid them in their treasonable projects, but will resist them to the last. Our Government, constitutionally administered, is entitled to our support, no matter who administers it. The truth is, our duty at first was to stand by our Government, and protect and defend it. I am for the Union, and I willing to defend it by any and all proper means. Onr Government is the best in the world.

If they are obeyed peaceably, so much the better; but let them be obeyed. I heard said that Kentucky will go out of the Union. Mr. Speaker, let me tell you, sir, Kentucky will not go out. She will not stampede. That has been tried. We won't go out—have not the least notion of it in the go out-have not the least notion of it in the world. You must take us out according to law and right, or take us dead. Believe this and act accordingly. It would be better for all of us. In his Shelbyville (Tenn.) speech, three years later, Gen. Rousseau said:

As a Southern man I have always been opposed to political Abolitionism, yet I can-not avert the fact that slavery is the sole ouse of all our troubles. Without a drop of Northern blood in my veins, naturally I had many prejudices; from the commencement of my manhood I had been pro-slavery. But I thank God that I love my country better than slavery and my prejudices, all. Do as I do my friends, rise above your prejudices, and look at this matter philosophically and without bias.

In all my speeches I told my friends that if they ever fought over the nigger, the nigger would get up and walk away. When you can take the palm of your hand and roll back the ocean's billows, then can you arrest the destruction of slavery in this struggle. Its existence will cease with the

I believe the contest will end this year, but, however, it might be prolonged I desire to fight until its termination. There can be no doubt about the final result. From Savannah Correspondence N. Y. Times. Perhaps the history of modern war shows no more complete success than the occupation of Savannah, whether viewed from military or civil stand-points. In a military view of the case, the success was as perfect as was possible for success to be. With but trifling loss, our army entered the city so close when the best of the rethe city so close upon the heels of the re-treating foe, that he had no time to spike a single cannon, or demolish a single item of war's machinery contained in the place. Every gun was left in its embrasure with its ammunition close at hand. The shops and depots uniqued the and depots uninjured. The wood-yards and graneries full, and the mills in operating order. The picture is full as bright when viewed in the light of a civil victory, as may be seen by the report of the action of the citizens already given.

Tradesmen are about reopening their establishments, convinced of the protection promised them by Gen. Sherman. The Quartermaster's Department takes charge of all cotton, but all other articles are left at the disposition of the rightful owners. Vigorous and effective measures are be-ing taken to clear away the obstructions in the channel. About a dozen steamers landed, and left the wharves to-day. This cir cumstance—the appearance of commerce upon the long-neglected waters of Savan-nah bay—the sight of goods landed on the old wharves, and the appearance of life on the piers and docks—do more to encourage the citizens to wish for the old order of things than anything else. Most of the merchants of Savannah have transacted no ousiness since the war began.

The stores and warehouses on Bay street, which runs parallel and close to the river front of the city, are the most commodious I have ever seen. Their arrangement is such that they front the street, which is placed on a terraced bluff, the terraces forming roads of equal hight with the different floors of the warehouses, and consecting with the entraces by means of subnecting with the entrances by means of substantial bridges. The rear of these buildings open on the ground floors on the wharves, which form a continuous line for half a mile. Goods are received from the vessels to the lower floor; thence elevated to the stories from which they are delivered at once, if necessary, to the wagons on the

The stores are said to contain about thirty thousand bales of cotton, which, being seized by the Government, will be shipped North as soon as possible. The cotton business is suspended, for there is no means of obtaining it from the back country, save by expeditionary parties.

The attention of the Government will doubtless be called to the cases of many citizens—most of them the o'd merchants of Savannah—who are heavily indebted t Northern creditors, and who express a de sire and an ability to liquidate all their liabilities, provided what cotton and rice they have is not taken from them. If the Government erminent takes this property from them they are ruined, and the loyal Northern creditors lose their money. This question is the main one now agitating the minds of the old cotton-dealers of Savannah, many of whom have not identified themselves with the rebellion, and all of whom think them. the rebellion, and all of whom think them

An elderly rebel, of the pot-gut persuas-ion extensively dressed in jeans, and bear-ing a gold-headed cane, came to General Sherman's headquarters one evening, to see what was up. He was treated well, and took his misfortune of loosing negroes and stock very philosophically, (as he couldn't help it!) and seemed to comfort himself with saying that "things is going to the devil, any how, and it did'nt make much difference how soon!" As he was taking his leave he asked: "Wha'r yer gwin from har, Gineral?" Sherman looked at the old fellow quizzically for a moment, and re pled: "Why pretty much where we damn please!" With this comforting assurance the gold-headed cane retired.

A most important discovery, far more so than that of the alleged source of the Nile, has just been made in South America. It has just been made in South America. It is that the great river Amazon has been found to be navigable from one end to the other; that, in fact, a Law route has been opened between the Atlantic and the Pacific. The Morona, a Peruvian steamer, which was sent to explore the Amazon, has arrived from Mayro, about 300 miles from Lima. The Morona navigated more than 2,000 miles of the Amazon proper, and 600 of the Yeayali and the Pachitea rivers, which, until then, had seen only Indiancanoes. The country is, of course, inhabited only by savages, but it is of wonderful fertility.

It is said that a number of British factory operatives were about to emigrate to America, the movement being charged to the instigation of the Union agents.

The Wilmington Failure.

[From the N. Y. Independent.]
The great naval expedition against Wilmington has ended in ignominious failure. A single fort on an isolated sand-spit of North Carolina defies the efforts of the North Carolina defies the efforts of the strongest and best appointed fleet which could be fitted out by a power that prides itself on its naval superiority. Seventy ships and six hundred guns—three days' bombardment—and the seventy ships and six hundred guns, unharmed themselves leave Fort Fisher also unharmed, and return to Fortress Monroe. Why this impotent conclusion?

We have spoken of this as a naval expedition. It was originally meant to comprise a co-operating land and naval force; the former to consist of about twenty thousand troops under Gen. Butler. The plan of attack included the explosion of a torpedo, containing two hundred tuns of powder, under the walls of the fort. If that succeeded, it was supposed the troops would be under the walls of the fort. If that succeeded, it was supposed the troops would be able to take possession of the works. If not, a bombardment by the fleet was to follow, and when the rebel fire had been silenced, the troops would carry the fort by assault. Eeither way the plan, if lived up to, bore good promise of success.

But the plan was abandoned before it was begun to be executed. Gen. Butler was deprived of more than half the force prometry.

deprived of more than half the force promised him. With the remainder he set sail from Fortress Monroe, and was driven into Beaufort by the same storm which for some lays delayed and scattered the naval fleet. The moment Admiral Porter got his own ships together, he decided to go ahead with-out waiting for General Butler; or rather, he seems to have seized upon that oppor-tunity as a convenient excuse for appro-priating to himself the sole glory of the an-ticipated success. He must therefore be content to bear the sole responsibity for the failure.

Admiral Porter began his attack on the morning of Saturday, December 24th, at half-past one, by exploding the torpedo-neing himself twelve miles away for safety being himself twelve miles away for safety from its expected effects. The explosion had no effect whatever. If it had done all that its inventor hoped, it still would have proved useless with the fleet at more than an hour's distance, and with the troops, who alone, probably, could have taken im-mediate advantage of it, on board the trans-ports in the harbor of Beaufort; they and their commander utterly unsuspicious of heir commander utterly unsuspicious of any violation of good faith or departure from the scheme agreed upon by Admiral Porter. From that time, not agun was fired by the fleet for nine hours. At eleven on Saturday morning, Porter began a bombardment which lasted till five in the afternoon—the enemy replying with deliberation for an hour or two, and when the fire of the fleet proved annoving to the garrison.

tion for an hour or two, and when the fire of the fleet proved annoying to the garrison and ineffectual against the fort itself, retiring to their bomb-proofs for shelter.

That morning arrived Gen. Butler with a few of his troops, and the next morning came the remainder. We will not stop to imagine what may have been Gen. Butler's indignation on discovering that the naval commander with whom he expected to coperate had thus endeavored to steal a march upon him, nor upon Admiral Porter's mortification when he came to know that his premature attack and his selfish hopes of personal renown had alike failed. Gen. Butler could not then have hoped that he should receive any cordial assistance from one who, instead of proving an ally, had thus transformed himself into an ally, had thus transformed himself into a rival, but he determined nevertheless to make an attempt. It was arranged, there-fore, that the bombardment should be renewed, the troops landed, and assault un-lertaken if opportunity offered. Accord-ngly, on the afternoon of Sunday, Gen. Butier put his troops on shore, and three brigades under Gen. Weitzel advanced to reconnoiter the fort. Gen. Weitzel, an en-gineer officer of the highest ability, and with a reputation for enterprise and daring second to that of no other officer, pro-nounced that the strength of the fort had not been materially impaired by the fire of the fleet, and that an assault was out of the question. While the reconnoissance question. While the reconnoissances proceeding, a force of the skirmishers ot clear under the walls, and one or two ntered the works, but almost every one was wounded by the continuing fire from the ships. The garrison meanwhile was lying safe in its bomb-proofs. Had an assaulting column advanced in such circumstances it would have been slaughtered by the shot and shell or the fleet. Had Porter ceased his fire, the garrison would have in-stantly manned their guns, and the assault-ing column would equally have been mown lown by grape and canister sweeping the narrow beach along which it must have dvanced. No military man will question nat in such circumstances the judgment of General Weitzel was the only one that could have been given, and that nothing remained out to re-embark the troops.

Admiral Porter followed up his alienation from Gen. Butler by hurrying North and publishing broadcast his own version of the facts, accompanied by such imputa-ions against General Butler as were sure to rejudice him in advance with the publicpublic always eager for a victim on whom wreak its vengeful disappointment. But we care not to comment on this. The above statement of facts is made up from Admiral Porter's own testimony. If it presents him in a favorable light, he is entitled to the benefit of it, until such time as Gen. Butler shall see fit to ask a hearing for him-

It is necessary to have possession of these places to protect navigation, and, besides, it is not good policy to maintain a garrison at a point for a time and then withdraw it, leaving the people at the mercy of bands of guerrilla Missouri Constitutional Convenmurderers and robbers.

The burning of the Court House at Owensboro makes the sixth burned recently by guerrillas in that part of the State.

Since writing the above we learn from the Evansville Journal that the towboat Kellogg was fired into by guerrillas on Friday at Owensboro. We hardly know how to reconcile this with the fact above stated, that our troops occupied the place on quently evacuated by them.

Governor Yates on General Grant.

Governor Yates thus announces his estimate of the origin and character of General Grant:

His generalship rivals that of Alexander and Napoleon, and his armies eclipse those of Greece and Rome, in their proudest days of imperial grandeur. He is a gift of the Almighty Father to the NATION in its extremity, and he has won his way to the exalted position he occupies through his own great perseverance, skill and indomitable bravery, and it is inexcusably vain for any man to claim that he has made Grant, or that he has given Grant to the country or that he are control by country, or that he can control his great genius and deeds for the private ends of selfish and corrupt political ambition.

We should suppose that General Grant, upon reading that, will agree with Pope: "He hurts me most who lavishly commends.

BY REFERENCE TO MY CIRCULAR NO. 3, D# TED October 25, 1864, I have endeavored to show what steps are necessary to be taken by parties who wish to prosecute their claims for compensation and bounty for slaves, from which it will be seen that the certificate of muster is necessary on which to base a claim to go before the Commissioners hereafter to be appointed. These certificates are not such as will entitle the bothers to pay, but are only evidence that the slave has been mustered in the United States service. Other papers must be prepared. To such as employ me to prosecute their claims, I would state that I have blanks prepared and approved by Col. Mussey, the Commissioner for the organization of colored troops in Tennessee, also by Col. Sidell, Assistant Coi. Mussey, the Commissioner for the organization colored troops in Term.ssee, also by Coi. Stidell. Assistas P. M.
